“The new ICH- GCP guidance: are you ready for its implementation in June 2017?”

The ICH GCP Guideline was originally adopted around 20 years ago and still provides an excellent standard for the conduct of clinical trials in humans. Since that time, the scale, complexity and cost of trials have increased. In particular, there has been an increasing use of electronic systems to record data. The nature of monitoring trials is also changing, with a more risk-based focus improving efficiency and targeting resources where they are needed most.

The new ICH Guideline – E6(R2), dated November 2016 – provides a unified standard for the mutual acceptability of clinical trials globally and supersedes the previous ICH GCP Guideline. Although the changes will have the greatest impact on trial sponsors, there is also an impact on investigators such as: Oversight of the trial, Data reliability, Source documents, Source data quality, Control of data and documents and finally the definition of certified copy.

The Belgian Association of Clinical Research Professionals (ACRP.be) connects colleagues working in the pharmaceutical, biotechnology and medical device industries, as well as in hospitals, academic medical centers and physician office settings.

Our vision is that clinical research is performed ethically, responsibly, and professionally everywhere in the world.

Our mission is to promote excellence in clinical research.
